Examples of ONIGIRI ACTION Events

Case #1 (age range: elementary to high school)

ONIGIRI ACTION Activity integrated into existing lesson on Japanese food

- Approximate Time: 45-50 minutes (extended for younger students)
- Brief intro on Japanese food culture and customs. Points of interest include: long versus short grain rice; the history of the rice ball as a food of convenience (like sandwiches); global issues of food security, food waste, and hunger.
- Students make, take and post photos of onigiri.
- Tip! Japanese rice sticks to plastic gloves. Pieces of regular plastic wrap, pre-cut and placed on the students' desks work better.

Case #2 (age range: kids to adults)

Creative Onigiri Mini Cooking Class

- 90-minute cooking class
- Sell tickets to interested participants in advance for $20 (includes ingredients and small donation) per person.
- Participants make creative onigiri art using seaweed, furikake, vegetables, etc.
- Creative onigiri are ideal for encouraging people to pose and post photos. You can make character onigiri (Totoro, Hello Kitty, etc.), animal-shaped onigiri (panda, penguin, etc.), or anything you like!

Case #3 (age range: high school, but could be adapted to other levels)

Onigiri Fundraising

- Some school did not allow make onigiri on site so volunteer parents made onigiri and students took photos with the onigiri and then enjoyed them as a snack during the class.
- The teacher collected donation from the students and donated to TABLE FOR TWO to further provide school meals to children in need.
- Also Japan club members raised funds by selling onigiri to the students and teachers.

Schools are not the only ones that can host an ONIGIRI ACTION Event!

Be creative and plan your own event!

FAQ for Organizing Event

Q. Can I get financial support?

- A. Please understand that we don't have a budget to fund your event nor offer cooking ingredients. Fundraising will be a part of your event planning. You may collect a participation fee or you may be able to find a local sponsor.

Q. Can you send instructors who can teach onigiri making?

- A. Depending on the location and availability of our instructors, we might be able to send an onigiri making instructor. We would ask you to provide a small honorarium and travel expense. Please consult us if you are looking for onigiri making instructors. Almost every Japanese person knows how to make onigiri, so you may ask a Japanese person you know to teach a class. You can also teach a class using Onigiri Action Step-by-Step Classroom Slides!

Q. Do I have to apply in advance to organize an event?

- A. You can organize your event by yourself and it is not necessary to report/register the events.

ABOUT US

Who are TABLE FOR TWO USA

OUR MISSION

Eliminate Global Hunger

Reduce Health Issues Related to Unhealthy Eating

TABLE FOR TWO USA (TFT) was established in 2010 as an extension of TABLE FOR TWO International, a Japanese nonprofit organization committed to addressing the global food imbalance, where more than 750 million people suffer from hunger while two billion live with diet-related health conditions. In the United States, our mission is to promote healthy eating among young people, recognizing the critical role of good nutrition in nourishing young minds and bodies, and its profound implications for educational success and lifelong health. We carry out this mission through Japanese-inspired food education programs, social good campaigns, and a meal-sharing program.

The Onigiri Action Campaign highlights the making of onigiri as a reflection of the organization's Japanese roots. Onigiri - or rice balls - are simple comfort food made with love for someone special. During the campaign, TFT supporters post onigiri photos to our websites and social media accounts using #OnigiriAction. For each photo posted, our sponsors will donate 5 school meals to children in need.

We also run the "Wa-Sho: Learn. Cook. Eat Japanese!" program, which offers a Japanese-inspired food education curriculum for K-12 and college students in the United States. Please contact us if you are interested in learning more!
